frequently. Three games in a row were frequentlys. Three games in a row were tallied up to their credit, giving them the set. Doust's cross court shots in this set, as throughout the remainder of the match, were a revelation, while McLoughiln showed his skill by the clever style in which he adapted himself to the stalling off of any kind of an attack.

It was up to the Westerner to open service in the third set again, and he stuck to his habit of winning. He had to fight for his victories now, however, because the visitors were able to get to fight for his victories now, however, because the visitors were able to get to his service. In the first game he made one of the prettiest place drives of the nistch. It was a return of a twisting drive by Doust, which McLoughlin got deep on the east side line after a hard run. He smashed it back on a dead line and Jones was unable to get near it.

The invaders took the third game quite easily through the inability of our men to control their drives. Moreover, they had control their drives. Moreover, they had quite a few lucky breaks. Australia counted again in the fourth game, but only after a hard tussle. The game went twice to deuce and of the ten points made eight were scored by placement. Jones got three of these, Doust and Hackett each two and McLoughlin one. Capt. Hackett was playing at his best and seemed to be as good as he ever was when he was half as good as he ever was when he was helf of the famous Hackett-Alexander com-bination. Jones was a whirlwind, Instead of weakening he gained strength as the games advanced and showed better tennis than any of the other visitors have dis-

America again took the lead in the set by bunching two victories in a row, one on Doust's service and one as a matter of course on McLoughlin's. The sixth game saw some of the prettiest play of the day before the Australians won by 4-2. Not one point in the game was won without a struggle. Volleying was fast and furious, while luminous drives and marvellous returns came so often as to be almost common.

The lead sersawed from one to the other until the eleventh game. The Australians failed to even things up by taking tralians failed to even things up by taking the twelfth, and with Doust serving the Americans made off with a love game, thereby getting the set. Hackett showed great generalship all through this gruelling set. Although he did not have the brilliancy of either McLoughlin or Jones, he used his head. Time and again he pulled has visiting players out of position, allowing McLoughlin to drive over an accurate dace shot.

With the sets 2 to 1. America leading and the sorrel topped Westerner serving in the first game of the fourth set, the spectators almost forgot their heavenly spectators aimst logot to the heavy shower bath and sat back in uncomfortable comfort. McLoughlin lived up to expectations by taking his game by a love score, but the Australians decided to do a little winning themselves, and the boy at the scoreboard did not have to disturb the Hackett-McLoughlin the Westerner served. numerals until the Westerner served again. In other words, the Americans won one, dropped three and took the fifth. The invaders were in the gathering fifth. The invaders were in the gathering humor and stowed away another cluster of three. This gave them the set, 6-2. Thus it came about that the Westerner started service in the fifth set and won his game, with a pop out by Jones, a weaking stab to the net by Doust and two service aces, after he had netted the ball on a return of his first serve. The Australians captured the second and fourth games without much trouble, while the Americans won the third, fifth and sixth.

With the score four games to two in their favor and the sets tied the home-players looked like possible winners, but they fell down in the next two games and the score stood 4 all. McLoughlin served in the might and won with four straight points. ONDON, June 7.- Craganour, the horse which came in first in the Derby but was disqualified for bumping, was sold to-day for $150,000 to the Argentine Government. C. Bower Ismay, the owner, stipulated that the horse should race no more. Craganour is an impressive upstanding animal whose every move bespeaks vigor and strength, and it is believed that this was considered as much as his breeding, great speed and stamina in the paying of the tremendous price. Such a large amount for a horse has been paid by only one American, W. O'B. MacDonough of California, who gave $150,000 for Ormonde.
